

Some people believe that, (remove this comma; do not put a comma before or after 'that') the national government tax payer money utilized on health care center.

Remarks

Write: Some people believe that the government should utilize much of the tax money on health care.

Other people argue that, (remove this comma) tax payer money use in (write: should be used on) other sectors. I moderately agree with this statement (write: agree with this statement to some extent) because health care is essential because when people are healthy, nation (write: the nation) will grow up, (put a full stop here) and other sectors are more indispensable such education, road infrastructure (write: such as education and infrastructure are also indispensable) because these sectors are important for economic growth.

Remarks

Your introduction should be something like this.

Some people believe that the government should spend much of the tax money on public healthcare. Others argue that it should be spent on other more important areas. In my opinion, healthcare is definitely important. If people are healthy, the nation will prosper. Other sectors such as education and infrastructure are also important and need government funding.

To begin with, the national government should taxpayer money utilized (write: utilize taxpayer money) on health care center because people can prevent their (remove this) diseases such as diabetes, hypertension and other diseases, which can treated (write: can be treated with) advancement technology and experience (write: experienced) doctors at reasonable prices and people can afford it.

Remarks

Do not write extremely long sentences like these.

You may write:

To begin with, the government should utilize taxpayer money on health care sector because it enables people to get treatment at affordable costs.

Or

To begin with, the government should invest in the health care sector so that poor people can receive affordable treatment.

These prices can be regulated by authorities. People will be more healthier, alleviating sick leaves in office and increase life expectance (write: healthier and more productive and they will live longer), they can spend more time with their loved ones.

Remarks

Healthier is a comparative word. Don't write more healthier.

I believe that tax payer money (write: when tax payer money) is used in health care center nation will health and productive which would be increase GDP. (write: the nation will be healthy and productive and the GDP will increase)

On the other hand, the national government should spend money (write: should also spend money on) other sectors such as education, infrastructure because these sectors are essential for development for nation. If national authorized (write: national authorities) spent on education sectors, nation would be more educated and they innovation for their nation which would be participated in economic growth (write: and their innovation would help economic growth). In the this way growth of the nation. (write: In this way, the nation will grow / develop) | I believe that tax payer money use (write: tax payer money should be used) on education and other sectors, which would contribution (write: contribute) to the development of countries and improve of quality life (write: the quality of life).

In conclusion, the national government should spend money on health care center because people more health and productive (write: it will make people healthier and more productive). The states should spend (write: also spend on) other sectors such as educational and road infrastructure as these sectors contribute for (write: to) economic growth.
